Misunderstood America

Editorial - BY BRUCE BIOSSAT It is not a new story that Americe is misunderstood and disliked in some parts of the globe. But it is always somewhat disheartening to learn to what limits these attitudes go in certain countries.

Recently the National Broadcasting Company presented a filmed television program called "As Others See Us." drawing on interviews with ordinary citizens in many lands around the world.

strikingly negative, ranged all over the lot Most astonishing were those in India. Though India is notorious for Opinions about American, often hostile attitudes toward America, few can fail to be shocked at the extremes of views revealed. According to NBC reporter Joe Michaels, many Indians are firmly convinced that the widespread outbreaks of so-called Asiatic influenza are the result of American H-bomb experiments.

Such a distortion obviously is the work of the Communist propagandists in Asia. To us it is utterly fantastic. But we cannot laugh off the-fact that many people accept the story as true.

Naturally such belief reflects ignorance-both of the scientific Indians to believe the worst of the United States.

We can never be complacent about such disfavor. It is well for us to be constantly re-examining not only our policies but our official and general behavior toward the countries we deal with

But in India's case there is reason to believe that the official attitudes outspokenly expressed by Prime Minister Nehru, Krishna Menon and other leaders have tended to foster intense dislike of us rather than encourage real understantding of this country.

For all its shortcomings, America is not the evil place many Indians make it out to be. On the contrary, it is still the world's greatest citadel of freedom, with vast material and spiritual accomplishments to show the world as the fruits of that liberty

It is not only our job but the task of responsible Indian leaders as well to see that the citizens of that populous country gain a true portrait of the nation which, more than any other, demonstrates he promise and the fulfillment of freedom

Take Back Seat to Interest In Prices of Upcoming New Cars

By DOUGLAS LARSEN NEA Staff Correspondent

You ought to see the paroxysm German-made Opel Rekord. of pain and panic which the possibility of price rises on the '58 models is causing the auto industry.

prices on upcoming new models.

When the complex ingredients in the price pot are served up with the new models this fall the best estimate is that there will be about a four per cent price boost. The '57s averaged seven per cent higher than the '56s.

But the current price ingredients are so explosive that anything could happen, including price cuts on some models.

The Administration in Washington is applying pressure on the industry to keep any price increases to an absolute minimum or hold the line, if possible. The auto industry is said to hold the key to checking further inflation.

Trouble is, auto makers point out, two events have already taken place which virtually force some increases on the '58 models.

First was the recent six dollar per ton steel increase. With a ton and one half of steel in the average car this is an increase of about $10 per car for the steel alone. The car industry buys steel about three months in advance so the increase will hit just as the production of '58s hits its peak.

Number two factor was a two cents per hour cost of living increase and a six cents per hour improvement factor increase which auto workers got June 1. The improvement factor is a contract increase given on the assumption that improving automation will increase labor output.

This will end up as an increase of between $16 and $25 per car if early production is about average, figures show.

But these increases just start the price spiral, the car makers say. Increased costs to their suppliers. increase prices of tires,, glass, other metals and fabrics, it is said. The most persistent and telling pressure against any price boosts on the '58s is from the dealers. A recent national poll of dealers run by Automotive News revealed that greatest irritation against the manufacturers. Dealers blamed the relatively slow sales of '57s on prices being too high. Every meeting of dealers around the country has produced some kind of resolution saying that the biggest mistake Detroit could make on the '58s would be to increase

Just about every market indicator which the dealers-and the Detroit experts-have before them indicates that the public is fed up with high car prices.

Probably the most dramatic indicator is the big boom in small foreign cars, selling for around $1,-500. Sales of small cars could be near a quarter of a million units this year, registration figures indi-

American Motors, which has gambled heavily on the emergence of a heavy demand for low-cost cars, is finally hitting pay-dirt this year in this field. Sales of its Ramblers and Metropolitans have been setting records and getting the
